SUMMARY

Highly motivated and skilled researcher with a PhD in Journalism, endorsed by the British Academy as Global Talent in Media and Communication (2025), with deep expertise in Nigeria-focused media, politics, and socio-economic research. Possessing a strong academic foundation, a growing record of peer-reviewed publications, and extensive international experience in university-level teaching and research. Proven ability to design and execute independent, high-quality projects using qualitative and mixed methods, including in-depth interviews, focus groups, thematic analysis, and systematic literature reviews. Experienced in sourcing, synthesising and fact-checking secondary, archival and media materials, and in preparing clear research outputs for academic and editorial audiences. Currently based in Lagos, Nigeria and available for remote collaboration and scheduled in-person interviews.

RESEARCHER ROLE ALIGNMENT

- Conduct in-depth research on Nigeria's socio-economic and political history through rigorous use of secondary, archival and media sources
- Design interview frameworks, draft structured interview guides, and conduct physical and virtual interviews
- Compile, synthesise and clearly present research findings for editorial development and publication workflows
- Prepare, organise and copy-edit transcripts and research notes for clarity, usability and quality control
- Verify dates, facts, quotations and contextual references to uphold high standards of accuracy and credibility
- Collaborate effectively with distributed teams and deliver high-quality research outputs to deadline

PROFESSIONAL COMMITMENTS

Dedicated to fostering inclusive and equitable practices in research and teaching, aligning with values of care, continuous learning, and proactive engagement.

RESEARCH INTERESTS

The Hiring Team
The Republic

Dear Hiring Team,

Re: Application for Researcher (Two-Month Remote Project)

I am writing to apply for the Researcher role at The Republic. I am a PhD-trained journalism researcher with a strong record of Nigeria-focused research on politics, media, and socio-economic policy. Your call for rigorous historical research, careful interviewing, and source-driven analysis aligns directly with my training and practice.

My doctoral research at the University of Kent, Poverty, Politics, and the Press: Uncovering the Complexities of Media Coverage on Nigeria's Social Investment Programmes, required exactly the type of work this role demands: identifying and synthesising secondary literature, analysing media archives, building evidence trails, and conducting and interpreting interview data. I designed interview guides, conducted in-depth interviews and focus groups, and produced clear findings for academic and policy-relevant audiences.

Beyond my PhD, my publications and conference work show sustained engagement with Nigerian politics, journalism, and public discourse. I have also developed strong editorial discipline through peer-review work and research writing, including checking claims, dates, quotations, and contextual framing for accuracy. I am comfortable preparing transcripts, refining research materials, and working to demanding deadlines.

I am currently based in Lagos, Nigeria for the coming months, available for remote collaboration with your editorial team and for scheduled in-person interviews where required. I would welcome the opportunity to contribute rigorous, reflective, and high-quality research to The Republic's reporting and analysis.

Thank you for your consideration. I would be glad to discuss how my background can support your project immediately.

Yours faithfully,

Dr Olasunkanmi S. Arowolo
